'NEW' HEAT MAY STRIKE DISTRICT IN SHORT TIME

Cooler Breezes Wednesday Night Provide Relief In Circleville

RESPIRE TO BE BRIEF

Ohio Death Toll Passes 100 Persons In Last Two Weeks

Circleville district persons who have been suffering from the intense heat breathe a sigh of relief Thursday after the temperature fell to 62 degrees during the night, providing many with their first comfortable night of sleep for almost two weeks. Cooling breezes at least temporarily relieved the weather situation.

But government weather ob-

John Kirkpatrick, 450 East Ohio Street, cooked his potatoes before they had been dug when sparks from a rubbish fire Thursday set fire to his potato patch.

Forecasters forecast Thursday that the temperature might remain in the 80s for the next 24 hours, but after that a new blanket of hot air would blanket the central Ohio area by Saturday.

Ohio generally enjoyed Wednesday night when the mercury fell below 70 degrees in nearly all sections. The torrid wave was the second longest in weather bureau history.

Rainfall Short

Pickaway County farm land continues to suffer from lack of rain, however, July's total rainfall being 2.53 inches below that of last year. The total precipitation for July, 1940, was 1.35 inches, according to the gauge at the home of Miss Abbe Mills Clarke, weather observer.

The county's second drowning in 11 days happened Wednesday afternoon when Hugh Bradley, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Bradley of Pickaway Township, lost his life in Scippo Creek. The body was recovered after a 30 minute search. A patient at the Orient institution for the feeble-minded drowned in Darby Creek July 21 when he became excited

CHALLENGE ISSUED FOR FOOTBALL TICKET SALE

Rotary Club members at their luncheon meeting Thursday voted unanimously to challenge members of the Kiwanis Club to a football ticket selling contest. No definite arrangements concerning the contest have yet been made, since members of the Kiwanis club have not yet been contacted.

He told the group that he believed there was a definite need for more vocational training in the high schools and that youth confidence in the future was necessary for success.

Visitors at the meeting included George H. Huber, Logan, West Virginia; Herb Kimley, Lancaster, W. G. Coppel, Art Hownsen and Jim Tootle of Chillicothe and L. M. Mader, of Circleville.

Harry Heffner was in charge of the meeting.

Air Raids Go On At Fast Pace

Bombs Being Dropped On Estuary Of Thames, Bristol Channel

LONDON, August 1 — German bombers kept hammering at the British Isles today as the government of Prime Minister Winston Churchill made preparations to fend off a possible series of assaults against virtually the entire British Empire.

Nazi planes swooped in successive waves over southeast and northern England during the night and early this morning and also raided Wales.

They were drive off by British anti-aircraft batteries and fighting planes, but many bomb explosions were heard in the southeast.

Incendiary bombs were dropped during the raid on southeastern districts. Several of them dropped through the roof of a house, setting fire to bedding.

The suddenly aroused occupant kept the fire under control until help arrived and the flames were extinguished.

Nearby stables and a granary also were ignited, but horses in the stables were saved. The roof of a hospital also was set on fire, but this blaze was put out so quickly that it was unnecessary to remove the patients.

AXIS ULTIMATUM SENT TO TURKS?

Berlin, Rome Want Nation To Take Stand Beside Britain Or Opponent

BUDAPEST, August 1—The Rome-Berlin axis was reported today to have issued a virtual ultimatum to Turkey to choose between an alliance with England or one with the axis powers.

This reported demand was regarded in Budapest political circles as an effort by Hitler and Mussolini to break up the tottering Balkan Entente and pave the way for the new order in southeastern Europe outlined last week in Salzburg and Rome.

(Editor's Note: Previous reports of German or Italian ultimatums to Balkan countries have been denied in Berlin and Rome.)

NIJINSKY, FAMED BALLET DANCER, LEAVES ASYLUM

BUDAPEST, August 1—Restored to mental health after two decades of darkness, Vaslav Nijinsky, one of the most famous ballet dancers of all time, arrived in Budapest today from the asylum in Switzerland where he spent the last 20 years of his life.

Nijinsky went immediately to the home of his wife's mother, who is a Hungarian.

The dispatch from Budapest indicating that Nijinsky has been restored to sanity comes as a surprise.

When he left the sanatorium in Switzerland a few days ago, reports indicated that while Nijinsky was progressing, he still was far from cured. His wife, Romola, recently attempted to obtain a visa for the dancer to enter the United States to continue the insulin shock treatments which led to some improvement.

Nijinsky was committed in 1919, pronounced incurably insane. His breakdown was complete and carried him into a "mental twilight" which put an end to one of the most spectacular careers in the history of the dance. From a slim, graceful figure he slumped into dull, balding middle age—his only artistic outlet being weird drawings and paintings which reflected his distorted mind.

OUTING OF 4-H CLUB FATAL FOR TEACHER'S SON

Boy Last Seen Sitting On Bank Found In Six Feet Of Water

GUARD'S EFFORTS FAIL

Funeral Services To Be Held In Wisconsin Town Saturday

Seven-year-old Hugh Bradley, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Bradley, of Pickaway Township, drowned in Scippo Creek, five miles south of Circleville, on the Harry Wright farm late Wednesday afternoon.

The accident happened during a 4-H Club picnic as Mrs. Bradley, mother of Hugh, watched 15 other youngsters swim. The boy was last seen sitting on a log on the bank of the creek, and was not missed for some time. Deputy Sheriffs Earl Weaver and Bryan Custer were called to the scene. Deputy Weaver, who recovered the body, said that apparently the boy either had fallen from the log or waded out too far. The body was recovered from six feet of water after a search of nearly 30 minutes.

The Circleville fire department was called as soon as it was learned the boy was missing. Fire department officials called the sheriff.

Life Guard Tries in Vain

Martin Poling, life guard at Gold Cliff Park, worked over the youth for nearly 15 minutes before Chillicothe Fire Chief Walter Johnson and Fireman Gilbert Mallow arrived with an inhalator. Efforts to revive the boy were abandoned after the instrument had been applied for nearly half an hour. Dr. E. L. Montgomery pronounced the boy dead after he had examined the boy and said that it would be useless to administer adrenalin.

The drowning was the second in Pickaway County in 11 days, a patient at the Orient institution for the feeble-minded having met death in Darby Creek July 22 when a boat in which he was paddling to try to catch a fish went to the bottom.

Family Widely-Known

The Bradley family is widely known in Pickaway County, the father having served Pickaway and Jackson Township schools as Smith-Hughes agricultural instructor for several years. They had lived in Pickaway County for the last 11 years. The little boy's mother has been active with her husband in Grange and Parent-Teacher Association work.

Hugh Bradley was born in Columbus February 16, 1933, a son of Gervase D. and Mary Coughlin Bradley. Surviving in addition to the parents are two sisters, Ann Loretta and Ruth Madonna, and a brother, Gene Francis, all at home.

The body will remain at the residence in Pickaway Township Thursday until 9 p. m. at which time it will be taken to Columbus where it will be placed on a train for Prairie Du Chien, Wisc., the former home of the Bradley family. Funeral services will be conducted in Prairie Du Chien Saturday at 10:30 a. m. Funeral arrangements are in charge of Donald E. Whitset, Kingston.

Photos Show Damage Caused In Collision

ABOVE are scenes from Ohio's worst railroad accident in 60 years at Cuyahoga Falls, near Akron. The larger photo shows the freight engine telescoped far into the passenger car whose passengers and crew met a flaming death when the car caught fire. Firemen may be seen through the car windows as they worked to extinguish the flames. In the smaller photo rescue workers are shown as they used an acetylene torch to cut away the tangled debris in which is buried the body of one of the victims. The extended arm of the victim may be seen through the window of the shattered car.

Train Crew Disregarded Orders, Official Claims

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 1—Flagrant disregard by the crew of the motor car of both their train orders and standing instructions today was blamed for the head-on collision with a freight train at Cuyahoga Falls, O., in which 43 persons lost their lives.

E. W. Smith, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Pittsburgh, made a statement regarding the horrible accident following a preliminary investigation, he said:

"The crew of the motor car not only disregarded orders to stop at Switch No. 1 at Silver Lake and to wait on the siding, but, in continuing on the main track from Silver Lake to Akron, disregarded another rigid rule, as permission was required from the block operator at Hudson to make this further movement. This permission was not obtained.

"Disregarding both their train orders and standing instructions that no train or motor car after running over permissible tracks may proceed further into a block or segment of the main tracks without receiving express permission from the block operator, the crew of the motor car proceeded toward Akron on the main track and collided head-on with the freight train at Cuyahoga Falls.

"The crew of the freight train was obeying orders and was preparing to meet the motor car at Switch No. 1 at Silver Lake."

Smith then went on to explain that with Engineer T. L. Murtough of Orrville, O., and Conductor Harry Shafer of Akron, O., badly injured, and with Baggage-master Charles Bilderback of Orrville, O., dead, "it is impossible to determine now why these orders were disobeyed."

The vice-president of the railroad pointed out that the motor car was equipped with all safety appliances, including a "dead man control," so that if the engineer had become incapacitated for any reason, the car would have come to an immediate stop.

The Theseus was built in 1908. It was owned by the Ocean S. S. Co., Ltd., and was 443 feet in length.

Other than the bare flash on the attack there were no details. There was no information whatever as to whether the Theseus was carrying passengers, was laden with munitions, or was ferrying colonial troops to the defense of Britain.

RESORT FLAMES CAUSE DAMAGES OVER $200,000

ATLANTIC CITY, August 1—Fanned to great intensity by a northwest wind, a general alarm fire today destroyed the $200,000 Ventnor City Pier, a large municipal structure on the resort's boardwalk in the exclusive Ventnor residential section.

Shooting flames 150 feet into the sky, the blaze was visible for miles along the South Jersey coast. Less than an hour after the fire broke out, the cupola crashed 65 feet onto the roof of the auditorium. The walls of the latter collapsed a few minutes later.

A number of fishermen were trapped at the end of an adjoining 800-foot long fishing pier when the fire started. They were brought ashore by lifeguards, who also saved several thousands of dollars worth of fishing equipment stored in a shack on the pier.

The main section of the pier, built during the boom days of 1927, consisted of a large stucco building, containing a 70-by-100 foot auditorium, and a large garden with a library on one side and an exhibition hall on the other. Around it ran a sun deck.

At the height of the blaze, which may have been caused by a cigarette tossed between cracks in the pier's flooring, a corps of volunteers tossed 6,000 volumes from the Atlantic City-Ventnor library to the beach.

Mayor Harry Hodson said the structure was covered by $100,000 worth of insurance.

43 Persons Die As Trains Crash In Akron Area

Gasoline-Electric Passenger And Heavy Freight Collide, Flames Cutting Off Escape Chances; Only Two Survive

OFFICIAL SAYS RULES DISREGARDED

Acetylene Torches Required To Remove Bodies; Screams Of Trapped Victims Heard In City Of Cuyahoga Falls

AKRON, August 1—While Pennsylvania Railroad officials sought to determine the cause of the train collision at suburban Cuyahoga Falls that sent 43 persons to a flaming death, Prosecutor Alva Russell studied the state criminal negligence laws in an effort to fix the blame for the tragedy.

Thirty victims, burned almost beyond recognition when a gasoline-electric shuttle train, familiarly known as the "Doodlebug," ploughed head-on into a 74-car freight train drawn by two engines at a Cuyahoga Falls crossing last night, had been identified early today. Thirteen remained unidentified.

At Pittsburgh, E. W. Smith, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, issued a statement charging the four-man crew of the "Doodlebug" had disregarded special and standing orders against proceeding further along the main line tracks without first stopping at a switch and obtaining permission from the signal operator.

At first, Coroner R. E. Amos reported 42 killed but after all the bodies were removed this was revised upwards to 43.

T. L. Murtough, of Orrville, O., engineer on the coach, and Harry Shafer, of Akron, O., the conductor, were both so badly injured it was impossible to question them immediately. Charles Bilderback, of Orrville, O., the baggage master, and A. L. Bailiff, 32, of Akron, the brakeman, were killed.

Only Two Survive

Only Murtough and Shafer of the 45 persons aboard the red-painted Pennsylvania Railroad coach which shuttled between Hudson, Ohio, and Akron, survived the inferno of flames which engulfed them when its gasoline tanks exploded. Five of the passengers were children. They were trapped inside the steel coach and sprayed with flaming gasoline.

Murtough and Shafer clung to their posts to the last possible moment and then leaped. Murtough suffered a temporary loss of memory as a result of a head injury. Shafer suffered loss of a hand and foot.

It was indicated in Smith's statement at Pittsburgh and by local observers here that the shuttle coach ran past a switch into the path of the speeding freight.

FLYNN TO TAKE FARLEY'S PLACE AS F. D.'S AIDE

WASHINGTON, August 1—Edward J. Flynn, Democratic national committeeman from New York and an outstanding Bronx leader for many years, today agreed to become President Roosevelt's 1940 campaign manager and Democratic national chairman.

He will replace James Farley as national chairman August 17. Big Jim Farley personally announced Flynn's selection after an hour's conference in President Roosevelt's office.

PEOPLE DIDN'T HAVE CHANCE

Accounts Of Train Crash Reveal That Flames Trapped Victims

AKRON, August 1—The 43 persons who met flaming death last night in the head-on crash of a Pennsylvania Railroad gasoline-electric car and a freight train at nearby Cuyahoga Falls never had a chance, witnesses to the accident said today.

R. H. Martin of Akron, one of the first to reach the scene, said: "The interior of the car was a mass of flames, with flames shooting out of every window. Most of the glass was broken. I saw a girl's charred hand extending from one window. Its fingers spread out in the flames. All the clothing had been burned from the arm."

"Another window was jammed by a mass of bodies."

Working at top speed in his effort to identify the victims of the wreck, Coroner R. E. Amos of Summit County declared:

"Those poor people never had a chance."

JAPS PROCLAIM NEW ECONOMIC SETUP IN EAST

TOKYO, August 1—Japan today proclaimed a Far Eastern economic and political hegemony, called for "firm establishment of world peace" on the basis of changed conditions and renounced her so-called traditional policy of "a pat on the back for everybody."

With particular emphasis on altered world conditions brought about by the war in Europe, the new Japanese policy was outlined by Premier Prince Fumimaro Koyama and Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka in separate statements.

The Netherlands East Indies, French Indo-China and South Seas mandated territory as well as China will find themselves aligned with Japanese politico-economic tenets under the new principle, it was said.

Just when Japan hopes to achieve this state is problematical. Official quarters emphasized that everything depended on the trend of affairs in Europe.

A number of fishermen were trapped at the end of an adjoining 800-foot long fishing pier when the fire started. They were brought ashore by lifeguards, who also saved several thousands of dollars worth of fishing equipment stored in a shack on the pier.

The main section of the pier, built during the boom days of 1927, consisted of a large stucco building, containing a 70-by-100 foot auditorium, and a large garden with a library on one side and an exhibition hall on the other. Around it ran a sun deck.

At the height of the blaze, which may have been caused by a cigarette tossed between cracks in the pier's flooring, a corps of volunteers tossed 6,000 volumes from the Atlantic City-Ventnor library to the beach.

Mayor Harry Hodson said the structure was covered by $100,000 worth of insurance.

43 Persons Die As Trains Crash In Akron Area

Gasoline-Electric Passenger And Heavy Freight Collide, Flames Cutting Off Escape Chances; Only Two Survive

OFFICIAL SAYS RULES DISREGARDED

Acetylene Torches Required To Remove Bodies; Screams Of Trapped Victims Heard In City Of Cuyahoga Falls

AKRON, August 1—While Pennsylvania Railroad officials sought to determine the cause of the train collision at suburban Cuyahoga Falls that sent 43 persons to a flaming death, Prosecutor Alva Russell studied the state criminal negligence laws in an effort to fix the blame for the tragedy.

Thirty victims, burned almost beyond recognition when a gasoline-electric shuttle train, familiarly known as the "Doodlebug," ploughed head-on into a 74-car freight train drawn by two engines at a Cuyahoga Falls crossing last night, had been identified early today. Thirteen remained unidentified.

At Pittsburgh, E. W. Smith, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, issued a statement charging the four-man crew of the "Doodlebug" had disregarded special and standing orders against proceeding further along the main line tracks without first stopping at a switch and obtaining permission from the signal operator.

At first, Coroner R. E. Amos reported 42 killed but after all the bodies were removed this was revised upwards to 43.

T. L. Murtough, of Orrville, O., engineman on the coach, and Harry Shafer, of Akron, O., the conductor, were both so badly injured it was impossible to question them immediately. Charles Bilderback, of Orrville, O., the baggagemaster, and A. L. Bailiff, 32, of Akron, the brakeman, were killed.

Only Two Survive

Only Murtough and Shafer of the 45 persons aboard the red-painted Pennsylvania Railroad coach which shuttled between Hudson, Ohio, and Akron, survived the inferno of flames which engulfed them when its gasoline tanks exploded. Five of the passengers were children. They were trapped inside the steel coach and sprayed with flaming gasoline.

Murtough and Shafer clung to their posts to the last possible moment and then leaped. Murtough suffered a temporary loss of memory as a result of a head injury. Shafer suffered loss of a hand and foot.

It was indicated in Smith's statement at Pittsburgh and by local observers here that the shuttle coach ran past a switch into the path of the speeding freight.

FLYNN TO TAKE FARLEY'S PLACE AS F. D.'S AIDE

WASHINGTON, August 1—Edward J. Flynn, Democratic national committeeman from New York and an outstanding Bronx leader for many years, today agreed to become President Roosevelt's 1940 campaign manager and Democratic national chairman.

He will replace James Farley as national chairman August 17.

Big Jim Farley personally announced Flynn's selection after an hour's conference in President Roosevelt's office.

PEOPLE DIDN'T 'HAVE CHANCE'

Accounts Of Train Crash Reveal That Flames Trapped Victims

AKRON, August 1—The 43 persons who met flaming death last night in the head-on crash of a Pennsylvania Railroad gasoline-electric car and a freight train at nearby Cuyahoga Falls never had a chance, witnesses to the accident said today.

R. H. Martin of Akron, one of the first to reach the scene, said:

"The interior of the car was a mass of flames, with flames shooting out of every window. Most of the glass was broken. I saw a girl's charred hand extending from one window. Its fingers spread out in the flames. All the clothing had been burned from the arm."

"Another window was jammed by a mass of bodies."

Working at top speed in his effort to identify the victims of the wreck, Coroner R. E. Amos of Summit County declared: "Those poor people never had a chance."

JAPS PROCLAIM NEW ECONOMIC SETUP IN EAST

TOKYO, August 1—Japan today proclaimed a Far Eastern economic and political hegemony, called for "firm establishment of world peace" on the basis of changed conditions and renounced her so-called traditional policy of "a pat on the back for everybody."

With particular emphasis on altered world conditions brought about by the war in Europe, the new Japanese policy was outlined by Premier Prince Fumimaro Kono and Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka in separate statements.

The Netherlands East Indies, French Indo-China and South Seas mandated territory as well as China will find themselves aligned with Japanese politico-economic tenets under the new principle, it was said.

Just when Japan hopes to achieve this state is problematical. Official quarters emphasized that everything depended on the trend of affairs in Europe.

PROGRAM IS OUTLINED

Extensive Report Being Drafted By Beightler For Washington

With the federal government stressing the need for repair of highways that are important as military roads, indications were seen Thursday that much work may be done by the State Highway Department on Route 23, running north and south through the state and through Pickaway County during the remainder of 1940.

Colonel Robert S. Beightler, highway director, predicted Thursday that the 1940 highway program in Ohio would probably be concentrated on the improvement of these highways designated as military roads.

At the present time the highway department is preparing an extensive report requested by the War Department for the condition of military networks and also of the state highway rural network, Beightler declared.

In a communication from C. E. Swain, district engineer of public roads, a report was requested showing weak links and costs of improving these particular weak sections so priorities can be assigned and steps taken for necessary defense requirements.

The following are the military highways in Ohio, U. S. Route 40, east and west; U. S. Route 25, north and south; U. S. 20, east and west; U. S. Route 23, north and south; U. S. Route 24, Toledo to the Indiana State line; Ohio Route 152 from Indiana line to Portsmouth; U. S. Route 52 to Huntington, W. Va.; U. S. Route 42, Mt. Gilead to Cleveland; State Route 3 from Columbus to Sandusky and State Route 61 from Sandusky to Mt. Gilead.

Beightler also declared that the administrator of the federal works agency had been ordered to give priority to approval of projects important to national defense.

It is possible, also, that some work may be done during the year on Route 22, running east and west through Pickaway County. This highway is the principal one between Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, and there are several weak spots in it where travel is slowed down because of the condition of the roadway.

PRODUCTION OF AIRPLANES GOES ON; UNION IRKED

SEATTLE, Wash., August 1 — Work on $50,000,000 worth of war planes continued at the Boeing Airplane Co. today as 6,000 A.F.L. members delayed strike action in support of wage demands.

Shortly before they were to have gone on strike last midnight, the union members met and voted to delay any walkout for at least ten days.

Union leaders said the cause of their dispute with the company was an employer's offer of 55 cents an hour on new contracts compared with the present 62½ cents.

Action of the union last night in voting to delay the strike allowed the company to continue producing planes for the British and United States governments while unionists, employers and federal conciliators seek to reach a permanent settlement.

F. D. R. TO FACE VITAL PROBLEM

Selection Of New Party Chairman Considered At Conference

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—President Roosevelt today faced a vitally important political decision—selection of a new chairman of the Democratic national committee to succeed James A. Farley who so successfully managed his 1932 and 1936 campaigns.

He received a committee of five headed by Edward J. Flynn, New York national committeeman and Bronx leader, empowered by the full national committee to ascertain the President's preference and make the appointment.

Only Mr. Roosevelt knew the answer and he was holding his own counsel pending today's session. This did not prevent a flood of rumors from circulating through Democratic ranks in Washington, each allegedly based on "the best authority" and each predicting a different man would get the call.

Some of the President's intimates were still clinging to the hope that Big Jim Farley can be prevailed on to reconsider his retirement as of August 17 and once more direct a Roosevelt campaign.

Farley is quitting the national chairmanship officially to head up a combine that is purchasing the New York Yankee Ball Club about September 1, but the President's friends point out that the baseball season is nearly over by that date and the Yankees at present are in fourth place. They are hopeful that Farley can be persuaded to postpone taking the baseball job until after the November elections.

These hopes seemed somewhat optimistic as Farley was quite definite in his decision to retire, and also because he is known to have been opposed to the third term idea even though now supporting the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket.

NAZI STRATEGY IN BLITZKRIEG SCHEME STUDIED

U. S. Intelligence Service
Has Difficult Time In Seeking Information

FOUR FACTORS CITED

Failure Of German Planes
To Find British Dromes
Causing Delay

By Drew Pearson and
Robert Allen

WASHINGTON, August 1 — Finding out what is going on inside the German High Command is one of the toughest jobs faced by U. S. intelligence services. Making due allowances, however, the best information available regarding Nazi strategy toward England can be summarized as follows:

1. For the last few weeks the Nazis have been feeling out the British, testing out their aviators, seeing what kind of resistance they would put up. Reports are that the Germans have been surprised at the doggedness of British pilots, and their bravery against overwhelming odds. German air losses have been four planes to one lost by the British.

2. Nazi strategy also has been to starve the British by disrupting their merchant shipping and sinking their convoys. In this they have been far more successful than the world knows. The toll of British destroyers conveying merchant vessels has been terrific.

3. Nazi airmen have also been trying to locate British airdromes, now hidden underground and camouflaged. This probably accounts for part of the delay in Hitler's long promised blitz.

4. There seems to have been a difference of opinion in the German High Command as to whether it would be wiser to concentrate first on the Mediterranean and clean up the British fleet, plus Gibraltar, Spain, Portugal and Egypt before tackling the tough problem of landing troops in England.

Whether these question-marks in the German High Command have been resolved in the last few days will be answered by events of current days and hours. However, there never has been any doubt that Hitler, whether he tried the Mediterranean route first or the Channel route, intended to crush Britain.

MOWERY TAKES OVER REINS AT PICKAWAY HOME

James H. Mowery, appointed by the county commissioners as superintendent of the Pickaway County Home, began his duties at the institution Thursday.

Mr. Mowery was appointed to the position following the resignation of Wilson S. Dunkel, who was forced to leave the home and return to his farm in Circleville Township because of illness in his family. He had been at the home less than a year.

Mr. Mowery has been a field representative of the Columbus Production Credit Corporation, and a tenant on the David Ludwig farm in Circleville Township for about 15 years. His brother, the late H. E. Mowery, was superintendent of the home for nearly 20 years, preceding the appointment of Dunkel.

After it leaked through that tiny hole, sewed up tight as a big secret, we got right after Al. Kauber. Wednesday, with our "third degree stuff" and just made him thaw out about what was going on in his leaving the Ashville High school coaching job for a better one. He had just returned from a short trip to Wisconsin bringing back with him the wife and their two boys who had spent the last two months at Watertown the home of her parents. He admitted that he had accepted a coaching position at Radnor, Ohio, in Delaware County, a school about the size of Ashville but a large gymnasium and more facilities to work with, he said.

Mr. Kauber also informed us that he was hired here 11 years ago after graduating from Capital University and has enjoyed his work in this community. He has also established an outstanding record for our school winning approximately 125 basketball games out of 150 during his stay here. In addition to that he has won three county championships during the last five years, and has placed high in the district tournament numerous times. In track he has also won a county track meet two years ago at which time he guided one of his stellar athletes, Red Mallory, to the state championship in high jump.

The Coon Brothers, Walnut Township, finished their threshing operations Tuesday of this week.

In addition to their threshing combine work, they report having threshed 300 acres of shocked wheat, using a 25-inch separator powered with a new tractor.

The yield varied greatly, they report, as did also the quality chiefly due to scab. The entire lot averaging around 23 bushels an acre, the test ranging from 54 to 60 pounds.

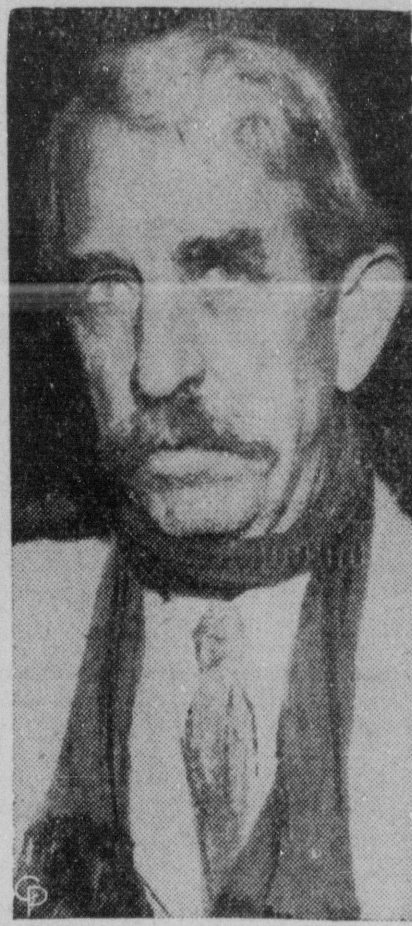

Their operations covered farms in Madison, Harrison and Walnut Townships.

The heaviest yield came from a field grown by A. K. Powell on the Mrs. Reber farm in Harrison Township, 18 acres yielding an average of 30 bushels of No. 1 wheat.

The largest single job done was on the farm of Mrs. Clara Plum, in Walnut Township, 90 acres yielding 2,073 bushels.

The boys report no job done which raised from "certified" seed, neither was there any done from the so-called bearded varieties. All was grown from mixed seed, with the variety known as "Trumbull" predominating.

WELDER'S TORCH CAUSES FLAMES IN SHIP TENDER

CAMDEN, N. J., August 1 — Sparks from a welder's torch today were blamed for fire in wooden scaffolding inside the forward stack of the navy's new $12,000,000 seaplane tender, the U. S. S. Curtiss.

Federal agents today were making a "routine investigation" of the blaze, but New York Shipbuilding Company officials scoffed at rumors of sabotage aboard the 9,000-ton vessel which was launched in April and will be ready for a trial run in January.

A welder working at the top of the 25-foot funnel failed to notice sparks falling inside the stack until the scaffolding caught fire, a company spokesman said. Thousands of Camden residents, remembering the giant $2,000,000 R. M. Hollingshead Company fire of Tuesday, rushed to the scene when an alarm was given. Flames were confined to the stack.

The Curtiss is a sister ship of the U. S. S. Albermarle, also built at the Camden yards.

DUKE AND WALLY READY TO SAIL FOR NEW POST

LONDON, August 1—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, described in the passenger list as "Captain and Mrs. Wood," prepared to sail from Lisbon aboard the United States liner Excalibur today en route to the Bahama Islands, according to a Reuters dispatch.

The couple will occupy a suite of four first-class staterooms in the starboard section of the liner, the report said.

Also aboard the vessel will be William Phillips, United States ambassador to Rome, who is expected to make a report to President Roosevelt.

BRITISH FLEET AT GIBRALTAR STARTS CRUISE

LONDON, August 1—A British battle squadron sailed from the Mediterranean stronghold of Gibraltar yesterday and began cruising around the Straits of Gibraltar, according to a Madrid radio broadcast, the London Daily Express said today.

The squadron, according to the report, is composed of five submarines, four destroyers, an aircraft carrier and three capital ships.

It is believed that the British warships soon will head into the Mediterranean, the Madrid radio reported.

Rock One Of Britain's Best
Bulwarks Since Utrecht
Treaty In 1713

NEW YORK, August 1 — With Gibraltar tensely awaiting new aerial raids, military experts to-day were divided in their opinions as to whether the famous "Rock" could remain impregnable in the face of modern warfare.

There were those who believed Great Britain's mighty fortress at the western end of the Mediterranean is no longer impregnable, but highly vulnerable by land, air and starvation.

Other military observers believed the Rock can withstand a siege for years and still dominate the western entrance to the Mediterranean.

Those who believe it will prove untenable in a long siege point to the fact that it now lies within easy range of modern guns. Four and a half miles across Algeiras Bay are big Spanish guns and howitzers with a nine-mile range of fire. At Point Camero, five miles from the Gibraltar docks, there are believed to be at least four 12-mile howitzers.

These batteries were set up by Italians and Germans during the Spanish Civil war and Italian and German officers still are believed to be in command of them under the guise of "experts."

Long Range Guns

German long range guns also are known to be at Mount Hacho Fort, near Ceuta, in Spanish Morocco, only fifteen miles from Gibraltar. These guns are believed to have a firing range of 20 to 25 miles.

Spanish artillery batteries are massed behind LaLinea, the Spanish town at the head of the sandy isthmus that separates the Rock from the mainland.

Thus, if Spain should join the Axis powers in an attack on Gibraltar it would be possible to lay down a terrific barrage on the Rock from three sides.

Gibraltar also is considered badly exposed to air attack. There is no flat surface in the colony large enough to serve as an air base. As a result, there are no defending land-based fighters. The planes that defend the Rock are all attached to the Fleet Air Arm and based on aircraft carriers or warships. The Rock is covered with anti-aircraft batteries but observers do not believe these can effectively stop enemy raiders.

Some observers believe that in the event of a determined siege by the Axis powers, it would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to revictual the garrison or replenish its ammunition and material.

Useless as Fleet Base

These same observers believe Gibraltar will be useless as a fleet base the moment a determined siege begins because of the proximity of the enemy land batteries. "Although it might prove difficult to land sufficient forces to conquer the British garrison, these observers believe it would be possible to demoralize the defenders and starve them out."

Those who believe the Rock can withstand a siege indefinitely and still dominate the Straits assert that no army, however large and powerfully armed, could take Gibraitor from the land or attack it successfully from the sea.

They believe that its cliffs, rising 1,200 feet above the Mediterranean, combined with an immense armament, make it impregnable against assault.

It may be bombarded by long-range guns and bombed from the air, but in the belief of this second school of thought, its well-protected batteries will still be able to dominate the Straits from the vicinity of Europa Point.

These observers point out that the Rock is provisioned to withstand a siege for years. It has huge water tanks holding nine million gallons of rain water. It has vast subterranean store rooms filled with emergency rations and ammunition. There is even an oxygen reserve calculated to function even if the Rock were enveloped in clouds of poison gas. The Rock also has been stripped of its vegetation in order to reduce the danger from incendiary bombs. The slender pencil of land that separates the Rock from the mainland is honey-combed with land mines and anti-tank wire. It is a stretch of desert sand, its dunes having been leveled 160 years ago to eliminate cover for any surprise attack. It would be swept by a curtain of deadly fire from field artillery and machine guns based on the Rock the moment any invader attempted to cross it.

The garrison at Gibraltar consists of some 3,000 men under command of Lieut.-General Sir Clive Liddell. All women and children were evacuated to French Morocco on May 21. A curfew goes into effect at 11:30 p. m. every night and "Fifth Columnists" are shot on sight.

The British flag has waved over Gibraltar for 236 years. The Rock has known the rule of Carthaginians, Romans, Goths and Saracens.

Britain's Bulwark Since 1713

In 1704, it was captured by an English and Dutch force under Sir George Rooke and Admiral Byng, and the British occupation was confirmed by the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713. Since then, it has been one of Britain's imperial bulwarks.

Only once has it been seriously threatened. That was during the European war that accompanied our own war of independence. In one of the longest and most fiercely contested sieges in history, it was attacked by the French and Spaniards from July, 1779, to February, 1783. In the latter year, Spain formally abandoned her claims to the Rock, receiving in return Florida and the Mediterranean island of Minorca.

The Rock itself is extremely small, only two and three-quarter miles long by three-quarters of a mile wide. If the Axis powers, supported by Spain, attempted a serious attack on it, the British probably would attempt to occupy the Spanish territory that dominates Gibraltar, particularly La Linea Algeiras, and Camero Point.

Those who believe the Rock can withstand a siege indefinitely and still dominate the Straits assert that no army, however large and powerfully armed, could take Gi-

PETTENGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

THE SPIRIT OF '76

Today Henry Ford starts another year. The six years he has lived past three score and ten have not been "labor and sorrow," as the Psalmist wrote. According to Mr. Ford, "anyone who stops learning is old—whether at 20 or 80. Anyone who keeps learning stays young." And so these lines are written about the spirit of '76—of a man who has not only brought more new wealth into the world than any man who ever lived, and so has earned his rest, but one whose young and eager mind is still marching toward new frontiers.

Thomas Edison, the greatest inventive genius of our time, was his friend. Edison, too, was young. "We don't know one hundredth of one percent about anything," were almost the last words of this man who had sought for truth for 16 to 20 hours a day for 60 years.

And so with Henry Ford at 76: "Mark my words: A combination airplane and motor car is coming. We will grow automobiles. Weeds will grow fuel. Furniture will be made from straw. Rubber from goldenrod or coal. We are going back to the land. We will marry factory and farm. The education of the future will be head and hand. I am still learning. The greatest thing in life is to keep your mind young. We are led by a higher Power."

Humility, the actual belief in what our pioneer forebears once called "a superintending Providence" must be a quarter of greatness. And another quarter is kindness.

Last week I was in Detroit to learn of Henry Ford. I found a man who had come many years ago from the farm, as had Ford. One day Mr. Ford and his wife came into the office where this green country lad was punching a typewriter. The boy got rattled in the presence of the greatest industrialist on earth. Ford noticed his confusion. He put his hand on his shoulder: "Son, don't mind me. If you and I went into the next room and took off our clothes God couldn't tell us apart."

That was 30 years ago. The boy is a responsible executive now. But he has never forgotten. Ford and his organization have made mistakes. John Lewis says he has made many. But on net balance what man of our time has done more good to more human beings in the six continents washed by the seven seas? Ford started business when the bankers' code was high price, small volume, and large profit per unit. Greater perhaps than his mechanical and organizing genius was Mr. Ford's pioneer thinking in the field of business economics. He was the first to cut the Gordian knot of low price, large volume, and small profit. He saw that it was possible to do the impossible—increase wages and lower costs. He is the father of Mass Production. And Mass Production has changed the world.

Because he brought the price down he made and sold 15,000,000 of old Model T's, whose claim to glory was "takes you there and brings you back" over every conceivable kind of surface from the equator to the Klondike. Still more, Model T built the ribbons of concrete and lifted the world from the mud. City fathers and county commissioners would never have taxed their voters to build highways for Fiat or Rolls Royce. In 1908, the year Model T came out, paved highways, even in great cities, were rare. And the last Model T, made at the rate of 6,000 a day, was three times as good as the first and sold for one-third as much.

Because Henry Ford sold cars at low price all other manufacturers had to do the same, and that in turn built up the great petroleum industry, producing in America alone a billion barrels a year.

Thirty million motor vehicles, hundreds of thousands of miles of improved highway, the petroleum industry in which 12 billion dollars are invested, together with steel, rubber, glass, leather, cotton and hundreds of other industries—all this and Henry, too! How many men since Adam have been responsible for so much?

By the time the world's highways had demanded a different car from Model T it is estimated that $7,090,428,176.30 of wages and income were attributable to the "old flivver"—the best loved and the most cussed car the world has ever known.

Last year the 30,000,000 American owned automobiles went 266 billion miles, enough to go to the moon and back 554,000 times! A round trip of 480,000 miles. Into these 30,000,000 cars every one of 130,000,000 Americans could sit and all ride on rubber at the same instant of time! A nation on wheels! All in one man's lifetime. When Hitler and Mussolini do half as much it will be twice as good as they have done! Free enterprise in America, National Socialism abroad.

A few years ago some doubters were predicting that the world would go to a lower standard of living. But not Henry Ford. "I have put the world on wheels. It will not walk again." Such is the spirit of '76!

BAHA'I GROUP GATHERS AT W. J. GRAHAM HOME

The regular nineteen-day meeting of the local Baha'i Group was held Wednesday evening at the home of W. J. Graham, East Mound Street.

After the devotional service, the consultation period was given to a study of the fundamental principle of unity, on which every law of the faith is built. Unity of group life developing into unity of nations, races, classes and creeds was brought out.

A recent cablegram from Haifa, Palestine, the home of the Guardian of Faith, was read. It stressed the importance of developing spiritual unity in a world whose civilization is torn with strife and discord and whose greatest need is the recognition of the place of spirituality in every phase of life.

The study for the evening culminated in the thought that true consecration is achieved only when faith is proven by deeds.

During the social hour the host served refreshments.

The inquest on France saddens every lover of freedom.

It has vast subterranean store rooms filled with emergency rations and ammunition. There is even an oxygen reserve calculated to function even if the Rock were enveloped in clouds of poison gas. The Rock also has been stripped of its vegetation in order to reduce the danger from incendiary bombs. The slender pencil of land that separates the Rock from the mainland is honey-combed with land mines and anti-tank wire. It is a stretch of desert sand, its dunes having been leveled 160 years ago to eliminate cover for any surprise attack. It would be swept by a curtain of deadly fire from field artillery and machine guns based on the Rock the moment any invader attempted to cross it.

The garrison at Gibraltar consists of some 3,000 men under command of Lieut.-General Sir Clive Liddell. All women and children were evacuated to French Morocco on May 21. A curfew goes into effect at 11:30 p. m. every night and "Fifth Columnists" are shot on sight.

The British flag has waved over Gibraltar for 236 years. The Rock has known the rule of Carthaginians, Romans, Goths and Saracens.

Britain's Bulwark Since 1713

In 1704, it was captured by an English and Dutch force under Sir George Rooke and Admiral Byng, and the British occupation was confirmed by the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713. Since then, it has been one of Britain's imperial bulwarks.

Only once has it been seriously threatened. That was during the European war that accompanied our own war of independence. In one of the longest and most fiercely contested sieges in history, it was attacked by the French and Spaniards from July, 1779, to February, 1783. In the latter year, Spain formally abandoned her claims to the Rock, receiving in return Florida and the Mediterranean island of Minorca.

The Rock itself is extremely small, only two and three-quarter miles long by three-quarters of a mile wide. If the Axis powers, supported by Spain, attempted a serious attack on it, the British probably would attempt to occupy the Spanish territory that dominates Gibraltar, particularly La Linea Algeiras, and Carnero Point.

PETTENGILL "The Gentleman from Indiana"

THE SPIRIT OF '76

Today Henry Ford starts another year. The six years he has lived past three score and ten have not been "labor and sorrow," as the Psalmist wrote. According to Mr. Ford, "anyone who stops learning is old—whether at 20 or 80. Anyone who keeps learning stays young."

And so these lines are written about the spirit of '76—of a man who has not only brought more new wealth into the world than any man who ever lived, and so has earned his rest, but one whose young and eager mind is still marching toward new frontiers.

Thomas Edison, the greatest inventive genius of our time, was his friend. Edison, too, was young.

"We don't know one hundredth of one percent about anything," were almost the last words of this man who had sought for truth for 16 good as the first and sold for one-third as much.

Because Henry Ford sold cars at low price all other manufacturers had to do the same, and that in turn built up the great petroleum industry, producing in America alone a billion barrels a year.

Thirty million motor vehicles, hundreds of thousands of miles of improved highway, the petroleum industry in which 12 billion dollars are invested, together with steel, rubber, glass, leather, cotton and hundreds of other industries—all this and Henry, too! How many men since Adam have been responsible for so much?

By the time the world's highways had demanded a different car from Model T it is estimated that $7,090,428,176.39 of wages and income were attributable to the "old flivver"—the best loved

Humility, the actual belief in what our pioneer forebears once called "a superintending Providence" must be a quarter of greatness. And another quarter is kindness.

Last week I was in Detroit to learn of Henry Ford. I found a man who had come many years ago from the farm, as had Ford. One day Mr. Ford and his wife came into the office where this green country lad was punching a typewriter. The boy got rattled in the presence of the greatest industrialist on earth. Ford noticed his confusion. He put his hand on his shoulder: "Son, don't mind me. If you and I went into the next room and took off our clothes God couldn't tell us apart."

That was 30 years ago. The boy is a responsible executive now. But he has never forgotten. Ford and his organization have made mistakes. John Lewis says he has made many. But on net balance what man of our time has done more good to more human beings in the six continents washed by the seven seas? Ford started business when the bankers' code was high price, small volume, and large profit per unit. Greater perhaps than his mechanical and organizing genius was Mr. Ford's pioneer thinking in the field of business economics. He was the first to cut the Gordian knot of low price, large volume, and small profit. He saw that it was possible to do the impossible,—increase wages and lower costs. He is the father of Mass Production. And Mass Production has changed the world.

Because he brought the price down he made and sold 15,000,000 of old Model T, whose claim to glory was "takes you there and brings you back" over every conceivable kind of surface from the equator to the Klondike. Still more, Model T built the ribbons of concrete and lifted the world from the mud. City fathers and county commissioners would never have taxed their voters to build highways for Fiat or Rolls Royce. In 1908, the year Model T came out, paved highways, even in great cities, were rare. And the last Model T, made at the rate of 6,000 a day, was three times as

and the most cussed car the world has ever known.

Last year the 30,000,000 American owned automobiles went 266 billion miles, enough to go to the moon and back 554,000 times! A round trip of 480,000 miles. Into these 30,000,000 cars every one of 130,000,000 Americans could sit and all ride on rubber at the same instant of time! A nation on wheels! All in one man's lifetime. When Hitler and Mussolini do half as much it will be twice as much as they have done! Free enterprise in America, National Socialism abroad.

A few years ago some doubters were predicting that the world would go to a lower standard of living. But not Henry Ford. "I have put the world on wheels. It will not walk again." Such is the spirit of '76!

BAHA'I GROUP GATHERS AT W. J. GRAHAM HOME

The regular nineteen-day meeting of the local Baha'i Group was held Wednesday evening at the home of W. J. Graham, East Mound Street.

After the devotional service, the consultation period was given to a study of the fundamental principle of unity, on which every law of the faith is built. Unity of group life developing into unity of nations, races, classes and creeds was brought out.

A recent cablegram from Haifa, Palestine, the home of the Guardian of Faith, was read. It stressed the importance of developing spiritual unity in a world whose civilization is torn with strife and discord and whose greatest need is the recognition of the place of spirituality in every phase of life.

The study for the evening culminated in the thought that true consecration is achieved only when faith is proven by deeds. During the social hour the host served refreshments.

The inquest on France saddens every lover of freedom.

White Bolts Democrats

COLUMBUS, August 1—A former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, George White, also twice governor of Ohio, today walked out on the Roosevelt third-term candidacy and announced that as a "Jeffersonian Democrat" he would vote for Wendell Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee.

Noted for his party regularity during his 35 years in Democratic politics, White became the first outstanding Ohio Democrat to denounce the President's third term ambitions and go over to the Willkie camp.

He was a delegate-at-large to the Democratic national convention in Chicago when Ohio's 52 votes were cast as a unit for Roosevelt for president and Henry A. Wallace for vice-president. Taking cognizance of this, the former governor declared:

"If (in supporting Willkie) I am inconsistent with the vote of the Ohio delegation in the Chicago convention, I can only say that I hold conscience above consistency, especially after the manner in which the third nomination was put over, and many other delegates feel the same way I do."

When Mr. Roosevelt was first elected in 1932, White said he believed in him and supported him wholeheartedly.

Cooperated with F. D.

"As governor of Ohio I actively cooperated with President Roosevelt and the New Deal on an emergency basis," he declared in a formal statement.

"In 1936 I supported and voted for the President for a second term with mental reservations, fearing he would make the emergency permanent.

"But now, as an American believing in a free democracy, I cannot bring myself to vote for President Roosevelt for a third term."

"As a Jeffersonian Democrat, I can and will vote for Wendell Willkie."

White served as chairman of the Democratic national committee in 1920 and 1921, and guided the unsuccessful presidential campaign of another former Ohio governor, James M. Cox.

His retreat from the Roosevelt standard came as no surprise to his intimates. They pointed out that at last he was in a position to even a score with the New Deal which he feels caused him to lose the Democratic nomination for U. S.

senator first in 1934 and again in 1938.

West Supported

Six years ago White, about to retire as governor, thought he had a good chance to defeat Vic Donahey for the senatorial nomination. But the party leaders in Washington, considering neither White nor Donahey aggressive New Dealers, entered Congressman Charles West in the race at the eleventh hour, and Donahey emerged an easy winner.

White had served his state in the legislature, in the lower house of Congress and as governor, and he was ambitious to round out his career with a term in the U. S. senate, so he tried for the nomination once more two years ago with U. S. Sen. Robert J. Bulkley as his Democratic primary opponent.

On a transcontinental speaking tour, boosting candidates endorsed by the New Deal, President Roosevelt stopped in White's home town, Marietta, during the campaign and, as White interpreted it, gave his blessing to Bulkley. Again White was defeated for the nomination.

In the following general election Robert A. Taft won over Bulkley. The two successive defeats rankled White, but not until now has he publicly rebuked the president. At the Chicago national convention he was importuned by so-called Willkie Democrats to accept the honorary chairmanship of their group. Mr. Roosevelt had not yet been renominated and White told the writer that it was neither the time nor the place for him to en-tain such overtures, but even then he indicated that he held some sympathy for the Democratic Willkie movement.

He declared privately that he would go along with the "draft Roosevelt" drive, but "could not also swallow the dictation of the vice-presidential nominee by the White House." He personally favored

Secretary of State Hull, but the President preferred Secretary of Agriculture Wallace who got the nomination.

White has long been an admirer of the Republican presidential nominee who, then affiliated with the Democratic party, managed the White gubernatorial campaign in Summit County in 1930.

S. S. AMERICA

THE S. S. AMERICA completed her brief maiden voyage the other day and received the biggest welcome New York has given any vessel in years. She had come from Newport News, Va., where she was built, to her home port.

The America is the largest and finest, as well as the newest, line of the United States merchant marine. She is a 34,000-ton vessel and cost $17,500,000 to build. The American was destined for the trans-Atlantic trade, but now will make cruises in the Western Hemisphere, perhaps between New York and California.

Blimps, army planes, coast guard vessels, sight-seeing boats, ferries, tugs, and thousands of people along shore welcomed the lovely ship with whistles and bells and flags and cheers.

She will start active duty August 10 with a cruise to the West Indies. Perhaps this ship would not have been started if the European war had been foreseen in all its ferocity and destructiveness. But we're rather glad she was built and hope she'll have a long and happy career, eventually crossing the ocean as planned.

MISSING TOOLS

IF Father cannot find his hammer, ten to one Young Son knows something about where it was last used. By this time in the summer Johnnie gets a little bored with inactivity and he and the other kids think of things they could make. Which is as it should be. But when high speed drills and metal-cutting tools, machine tools of all kinds begin to be missing from warehouses, it's a matter for the FBI.

Burglars in New York broke through a 12-inch wall to get at steel drills. Two plants in Chicago report being robbed. Unsuccessful attempts to rob plans of one company in three New England cities and one Canadian one have come to light.

It might be the increased value of those tools which prompts the present efforts to get them. But it might also be that a foreign government is encouraging the burglars. So the FBI has quite a little job on its hands. This is no time to play with this kind of theft. National defense needs its tools.

It's a good thing school doesn't keep in summer, for how could teachers make the kids believe this is the temperate zone?

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By— Charles P. Stewart

HOPEFUL as the Republicans are of electing Wendell W. Willkie to the White House, they have to admit that, even if they do, he still won't have a solidly Republican congress to co-operate with him during his first two years in office, anyway.

They profess confidence of their ability to put a G. O. P. majority into the house of representatives, and that they can do it if they get votes enough. The senators' terms expire, however, only one-third at a time. And the Democrats' present senatorial margin of advantage is so wide that, though the Republicans succeed in winning every senate seat at stake this year, the Democrats still will have a small majority.

If Willkie and McNary are winners, the G. O. P. will have the vice presidential vote to rely on whenever a senate vote occurs, but it isn't likely that there'll be any. On the contrary, a heavy shrinkage in their majority probably will consolidate the surviving Democrats. There have been rather too many of them for their party's own good throughout the Roosevelt administration, because an excess of one side's members, in a body like the United States senate, encourages insubordination.

Wendell then, assuming his presidential election, is due to have at least the first half of his first term, in all probability, rendered something of a worry to him by an unmanageable upper congressional chamber. It will be 1942, at the earliest, before he can get it Republicanized.

Quite An Undertaking
It will be quite an undertaking for the G. O. P. to gain control of the house of representatives in November. Still, supposing a sufficient landslide to elect Willkie and McNary, it's a distinct possibility.

As previously remarked, it isn't even a possibility in the senate's case.

In fact, the possibility of Republican victories in all of this year's senatorial elections is only theoretical. The G. O. P. may make quite a few gains, but it's a million-to-one that they don't scoop everything.

For instance, Democratic senators' terms are expiring, at the end of 1940, in such states as Florida, Mississippi, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. Who'd bet that all these commonwealths will go Republican? G. O. P. strategists are making some pretty tall claims, to be sure. They point out that Wendell and Charles McNary will chalk up surprisingly all over Dixie. They actually predict that they'll beat Senator Tom Connally in the Lone Star state. But nobody's staking any money on it.

Other states where Democrats are up for senatorial re-election in November are Arizona, Connecticut, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Washington, West Virginia, Wyoming and Utah.

It's conceivable that the G. O. P. will make some captures up and down this list.

JIM FARLEY'S INSIDE MEMOIR

WASHINGTON — Jim Farley made $68,500 from his best-selling book, Behind the Ballots—the inside story of how Roosevelt won the presidency in 1932. Jim is now convinced he has the material for another book that should be worth at least $100,000.

It's the inside story of his relations with the President as a member of the cabinet, of their rift over political policies, the third term, Jim's own presidential ambitions, and of the hectic behind-the-scenes events at the recent Chicago convention.

Jim has filing cases of carefully preserved material for his memoir. Only intimates know it, but he has also kept a detailed diary of every day's events since he tied up with Roosevelt nine years ago. The first thing Jim did after the Chicago convention was to hide himself away for three days to dictate his own account of what happened behind the scenes, including two brief telephone conversations with Roosevelt and an equally brief personal meeting with White House generalissimo Harry Hopkins.

But one important part of Jim's new book is still missing—the last chapter.

He still has to secure the President's explanation of two key points: One, what caused him, beginning early in 1938, gradually to ease Jim out of the picture as political helmsman; and two, whether the President really did oppose Farley's presidential ambitions because he is a Catholic.

RELIGIOUS ISSUE

Farley's friends lay much of the blame for his shelving upon Hopkins. Hopkins always has professed to be a strong Farley booster, but Jim's lieutenants claim they have good grounds to believe that actually this was not the case.

The President has publicly denied a syndicate article which said he told a Southern congressman that Farley could not be on the Democratic ticket because he is a Catholic. But Jim is not satisfied with this repudiation.

So before he steps out of the cabinet he intends to sit down with Roosevelt and put this and the other question up to him, man to man. What transpires will give Jim his missing last chapter.

NOTE—In the last chapter of Behind the Ballots, under the sub-caption "A Little Advice", Farley made these interesting observations: "A good thing to remember is that nothing is ever gained by trying to seek revenge in politics. The man who starts to destroy another man usually winds up by destroying himself. . . . The yearning for the White House has ruined more than one distinguished career."

YANKEES' BOSS

Bossing the New York Yankees baseball club will be only a sideline with Jim when he returns to private life next month.

DIET AND HEALTH

Infants Safeguarded

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

FOOD, clothing, bathing, exercise and recreation—these are the pillars of health for the youngster's second and third summers. Those were the traditionally dangerous summers, but improvements in our knowledge of hygiene, and in the preparation of food have changed that tradition. Common sense has also come to the rescue, especially in the matter of clothing for summer. Indeed it applies to the older generation. I expect to see the time when it will be just as unusual during our American summers to see a man with a coat on as to see him with an overcoat. And shirts cut low and open at the neck instead of four folds of linen plus neck-tie! It is astonishing to remember that the sight of a little tot with just a sarong or a pair of shorts as clothing would have been considered shocking not so long ago.

Aid to the Feet
Going bare footed makes for strong feet later on. Screens, electric fans, refrigerators, air conditioning, shower baths, swimming pools, public parks, escape to the country in the automobile—all these are hot weather aids our grandfathers knew nothing about.

The "second summer" was considered dangerous because then weaning had been accomplished and the menace of contaminated milk and other foods was ever present. But now no longer, with proper milk inspection. And more often than before with this health improvement weaning is over by the first summer, so artificial feeding is a problem then also.

The first consideration for any baby food is bacterial cleanliness. With correct supervision the summer more than any other season of the year offers opportunity for physical development through exercise. A wash tub full of water in the back yard is a private pool for practical purposes and just as good as the ocean.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clending has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet", "Indigestion and Constipation", "Feeding and Gaining", "Infant Feeding", "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes", "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin".

CHAPTER THIRTY

FOR THE fraction of a second Mina's eyes were amazed as she saw Robert Barton and Linda standing at the door of the Ackerman apartment.

"There was hatred in the glance and something that was reminiscent of fear. She opened the door wider, though, and asked them to come in."

"We want to see Miss Ackerman, Miss Sue Ackerman," Robert said quite formally. "Miss Avery wishes to offer her condolence."

"Certainly! Won't you sit down?" Questions were spinning through Linda's brain. What was Mina Nevins doing at this apartment, far uptown in The Bronx, at this hour? Did she know these people? Had the sister sent for her?

"Sue will be here in a moment," Mina said, and reached for a cigarette. Robert sprang to his feet to light it for her and she studied his face as she cupped her hands around the match. "So I wasn't so far wrong in my surmises that you and Miss Avery are fond of each other?" she asked coolly.

"Mr. Stafford was detained, so I offered to come as an escort," Robert answered.

"Detained? Surely not by the police?" Her laughter was low and frightening.

"What are you doing here, Mina?" Rob asked.

"Sue is an old friend of mine. We knew each other in Hollywood. When I heard what had happened, of course I came out. She sent for me, in fact."

"I heard your program tonight. That is, I heard part of it. Miss Nevins," Linda said, because she could not sit there so quietly while the day ran into morning. "Clara-bell loved your voice. I didn't know she knew you, but now I understand."

"We never had met. It is Sue I know."

The older sister came into the room then. Her face was white and drawn, but her eyes held poise. She did not take Linda's proffered hand, but sank down on a divan.

"So you are the girl who escaped the bullets because you gave my sister your desk?" she asked in a low, husky voice.

"I'm so sorry, Miss Ackerman, but she asked for my desk."

"You shouldn't be sorry. Otherwise you would have got the bullets. The murderer might have waited around for you."

"But it's so terrible!"

"So is life, my dear! You're just learning. Other people get the breaks. The May-time baskets are hung at somebody's else door. The parade goes down another street. Don't ever think it doesn't." Her voice was bitter with frustration and worry and anger.

"But your sister—"

"I know. She was all I had, and I loved her. She—she never had a chance to even dream how nice life could be if you drew a lucky number." Then the hardness broke and her eyes were as scared as a child's.

"Someone is coming for me soon, so I can see her. She's at the undertaker's now. She's—dead."

All the way down the street Linda remembered the woman's shattered armor. She thought, too, of something else and voiced her thought to Robert.

"If Mina had been guilty she would not have wanted to be in

There was a hatred in that glance and something reminiscent of fear.

that house tonight. She would feel badly over her mistake."

"Mina didn't do it," Rob answered. "She couldn't have. I checked the studio and she had not left the rooms. Dozens of people know where she was from hours before the murder until long after I was afraid, too. That's out and I'm glad. It would have been such a terrible thing to bring on you."

"Then—" She was as lost as the raindrops swirling down the wind.

"Sarah will have an alibi, too, I take it. I think she was at the theater all evening."

"But who could have done it?" "The police will find out. That's their job. We don't know who this Ackerman girl was, what she did on her nights off. She may have been part of an espionage ring, for anything we can say. I think, Linda, honey, the killer wanted her."

If that were true, it would make everything so simple. Linda was thinking. She would be free of this suspense and depression.

Robert parked his car at the apartment house door where they both lived and went up the long stairway with her. "Nothing is any too safe these days," he said.

Caroline ventured to ask more questions as Linda undressed. There had been another note in the door from Terry, she said. Her face looked happier. Linda took a long, warm bath, used her most expensive bath salts and bath powder, and brushed her hair until it snapped with electricity.

Then she slipped into a woolly violet robe and her violet mules and stepped through the balcony window. The rain was stopping and only a wet wind blew through the garden. Dawn was coming, and the chimes of the monastery bells called to prayers. Through the windows she could see dark-robed figures hurrying to their matins.

For some people there was peace, she thought, leaning against the corner post. They withdrew from the world and lived in dreams. Even down in Hamilton, Va., her aunt was doing that. Breakfast always was at nine, luncheon at one, tea at five, and dinner at half-past seven.

The ordered days brought calm and happiness. No roads led away into bright confusion. They only went around the pond and came back.

That was where she and Ronnie belonged. If Ronnie had stayed there to carry on in his father's defeated bank, they would not be so startled and unhappy tonight. Ronnie had said that he would call, but he had not done so. She remembered things she had read about third-degree confessions—about weary prisoners in whose faces lights were flashed and into whose ears questions were poured until they were too tired to resist.

Maybe while she watched the dawn throw silver magic into the sweet, wet garden, Ronald was in a hot cell somewhere. She closed her eyes against the picture. No, no, not that! She would rather be the accused one.

The telephone in the room behind her began to ring. She ran up the steps to the window, joyfully. Ah, that meant Ronnie was free. One violet mule slipped off and went flying down into the garden, but she did not notice.

"Yes!" she half-whispered, half-caroled into the mouthpiece.

It wasn't Ronald's low, deep voice that answered. It was a girl's, and it was stripped now of pretense and jealousy. It was a naked, wounded thing as it came across the wires.

"I've heard about the awful murder, Linda. And Linda, where—where's Ronnie?" Sarah Markely asked.

Pigs enjoy these thick leaves

A Weed of Many Names

Purslane pursley or pussley, whatever name you call it, this weed of many names continues to be one of the most persistent of garden pests. Yet it was once grown as a salad plant and pot herb. Today it is only considered good for pig food. Pigs love its thick, juicy leaves.

A close-up of this weed is shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph so that gardeners can identify it even if they do not know which name to give it. This weed bears yellow flowers which only open, however, on sunny mornings. The weed is low-growing in habit and is an annual which develops rapidly once it makes its appearance. The reddish, fleshy stems root at the joints when they are in contact with the soil.

If you are aware of the presence of this weed get rid of it before it goes to seed, for the seeds have unusually long-keeping qualities. The weed can best be controlled by hand-pulling it when the ground is moist.

The Ohio death toll passed the 100 mark with the drowning at Buckeye Lake of Arthur Boylan, 30, Pittsburgh. The victim was swimming when he apparently suffered a cramp.

Heavy crop damage was reported due to the blistering sun and lack of rain, with corn being hardest hit.

Withering heat also caused heavy damage to highways throughout the state by causing "blowups" of brick and concrete paving.

"The damage is too great even to estimate at the present time," Hal G. Sours, assistant state highway director, said.

Congressmen Suffer

One of the last cities to get relief was Washington, where senators and representatives for 14 days had worked in temperatures which daily mounted into the 90s. As late as yesterday afternoon, the mercury stood at 92. But thundershowers last night broke the heat's grip. A high of 86 was expected there today.

Chicago, which in common with the rest of the Great Lakes region as refreshed by cooling breezes yesterday, saw the mercury move upward again today, and anticipated a high of 94 before nightfall. No reprieve of last week's plus-100 degree heat was foreseen for Chicago, however.

New York anticipated plus-80 degree heat today, following a high of 86 yesterday. Such states as Kansas, Oklahoma, Kentucky and Missouri remained hot, having received little relief.

The Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain states enjoyed moderate weather today, and temperatures from the South, although some of them were in the 90s, were described as seasonal.

TWO-OCEAN NAVY MEASURE MOVES TO UPPER HOUSE

WASHINGTON, August 1—The $4,963,151,957 two-ocean navy-national defense measure, passed by the house with only a single negative vote, was sent to the senate today for final passage.

Rep. Marcantonio (F-L) N. Y., was the lone dissenter.

The measure would provide funds to begin the construction of the largest navy in the world and the manufacture of materials for a 2,000,000-man army.

Except for a provision for a $7,000,000 drydock in New York to service the navy's largest battleship, which was deleted for further committee study, the legislation passed the house in practically the same form the President requested.

The bill faces a widespread support in the senate and Majority Leader Barkley intends to present it for early action. It would grant the army and navy $2,234,191,957 in direct funds and $2,728,960,000 in contract authorizations.

The bill contains a provision to repeal the peace-time power given the President in a previous bill, to hastily enacted last month, to seize and turn over to the government for operation any manufacturing plant or facility which, in his opinion, is essential to national defense.

New York anticipated plus-80 degree heat today, following a high of 86 yesterday. Such states as Kansas, Oklahoma, Kentucky and Missouri remained hot, having received little relief.

The Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain states enjoyed moderate weather today, and temperatures from the South, although some of them were in the 90s, were described as seasonal.

TWO-OCEAN NAVY MEASURE MOVES TO UPPER HOUSE

WASHINGTON, August 1—The $4,963,151,957 two-ocean navy-nation defense measure, passed by the house with only a single negative vote, was sent to the senate today for final passage.

Rep. Marcantonio (F-L) N. Y., was the lone dissenter.

The measure would provide funds to begin the construction of the largest navy in the world and the manufacture of materials for a 2,000,000-man army.

Except for a provision for a $7,000,000 drydock in New York to service the navy's largest battleship, which was deleted for further committee study, the legislation passed the house in practically the same form the President requested.

The bill faces a widespread support in the senate and Majority Leader Barkley intends to present it for early action. It would grant the army and navy $2,234,191,957 in direct funds and $2,728,960,000 in contract authorizations.

The bill contains a provision to repeal the peace-time power given the President in a previous bill, hastily enacted last month, to seize and turn over to the government for operation any manufacturing plant or facility which, in his opinion, is essential to national defense.

NEW YORK—Berlin newspapers today gave wide prominence to United States Secretary of War Stimson's observation before the house military affairs committee that Great Britain may be defeated in 30 days, according to a CBS broadcast from Berlin. The statement was cited by Nazi newspapers as proof of the "feeling in the United States that Great Britain cannot win."

LONDON—Great Britain's rate of aircraft production now exceeds that of Nazi Germany, the well-informed aviation periodical "The Aeroplane" declared today. The publication estimated German aircraft production at approximately 1,800 planes monthly. Ten Messerschmitts, 15 Heinkels, 25 Junkers and 10 Dorniers represent the maximum German daily output, the magazine said.

CAIRO—Planes of the Royal Air Force recently bombed and sank two Italian submarines in the Mediterranean, it was announced today.

RAIDS GO ON

planes bombed a rural area of northwestern England, but failed to cause any damage or casualties.

An official British announcement said that German aircraft dropped bombs on a few points near the Thames Estuary and Bristol Channel, slightly damaging a number of houses. No casualties were reported, the statement said.

The air ministry added: "R. A. F. fighters intercepted and engaged a small force of enemy aircraft off the southeast coast yesterday evening. An enemy fighter was shot down."

"Two of our fighters failed to return from yesterday's patrols." Last night raiders struck the southeast coastal region, provoking a four-hour battle that ended when the Nazi planes retreated. This fight followed an announcement that the British had struck heavy counter-blows, hitting 400 German railway cars and other vital targets across the English Channel.

Reports, Rumors Checked

While the British aerial defenses were kept busy by Nazi planes, the government gave close scrutiny to reports and rumors intimating that, if and when Germany tries to invade Britain, Japan, Spain and Italy will strike simultaneous blows against vital, far-flung parts of the British Empire.

Rising Anglo-Japanese tension lent color to this possibility, but authoritative quarters intimated no great alarm is felt at present. They said Britain has long prepared to cope with such a contingency.

A new spurt of naval activity also figured in the military situation.

Britain was elated over two new triumphs for her warships, the crippling of a German auxiliary cruiser in the South Atlantic and the sinking of an Italian-chartered tanker in the Mediterranean during an Italian air attack on a British naval squadron.

(The London Daily Express said the Madrid radio broadcast a report that a British battle squadron sailed from Gibraltar yesterday and began cruising around the adjacent straits, evidently with the intention of heading into the Mediterranean in search of prey.)

The converted British armed cruiser Alcantara routed the German commerce raider in the South Atlantic battle, according to the admiralty announcement. It was admitted, however, that two of the Alcantara's men were killed and seven wounded by a "lucky shot" which struck the British vessel.

Ship Anchors At Rio

(A dispatch from Rio de Janeiro said the Alcantara anchored in the Rio de Janeiro harbor during the night. The battle with the German vessel was said to have been fought near Trinidad Island off the coast of Brazil slightly north of the Brazilian capital. It was expected a shellhole through the Alcantara's bows would be repaired.)

The German vessel escaped behind a smoke screen after being struck and damaged in the battle, the admiralty said.

In the Mediterranean encounter British warships sank the Italian-chartered Greek tanker Hermone just as Italian planes swooped down on the British squadron, dropping numerous bombs.

British planes shot down one of the Italian bombers, it was claimed, and crippled a second. One of the British planes made a forced landing at sea, but the pilot was rescued. The admiralty said the British naval squadron sustained no damage or casualties.

Still another admiralty announcement said the British destroyer Delight, a 1375-ton vessel carrying ten guns and eight torpedoes had been sunk by a German air attack but with only small loss of life.

The aerial warfare reached another peak of intensity last night when fleets of German bombers and fighting planes began attacking British shipping in the channel. At least 40 British fighting planes hurled themselves at the raiders two of which were reported shot down into the channel.

At Vichy the French government headed by Marshal Henri Philippe Petain struggled to choose seven permanent judges for a national supreme court. This court will try political offenders, diplomats, military authorities, stock exchange officials and business men and even journalists accused of offenses against the state.

Former Premier Daladier and other ex-government chiefs are expected to be the first defendants brought before the court, which will examine their responsibility for France's war conduct and military defeat.

In the Balkans, Romania moved toward negotiations with Bulgaria for settlement of the latter's claims on South Dobruja. Negotiations with Hungary regarding its demands for Transylvania may follow settlement of Bulgaria's claims.

There were indications, however, that growing opposition to a settlement of the Transylvanian issue may lead to a cabinet crisis in Romania.

licemen declared they never had seen such a fire.

"I've seen some awful ones in my day," a fireman said, "but this is the worst yet."

L. D. Alexander, a state highway patrolman, said that the fire caused him to believe at first that a train had struck a gasoline truck.

O. M. Lodge of Columbus, freight train engineer, and E. N. Reynolds of Orville, fireman, stayed with the locomotive until it had ground to a stop, surrounded by flames from the telescoped car.

"We just came around the bend in the road," Lodge said, "when I saw the gas-electric locomotive in front of us."

"We jammed on the brakes just as we hit, and there was a terrific explosion."

Reynolds, the fireman, stayed with her through the fire and explosion until she came to a stop, then we jumped through a wall of flame that surrounded the whole wreckage.

"What we did just after that I don't remember."

Alexander assumed charge of the rescue work before other police and firemen arrived. Sending a truck driver to call for ambulances, he attempted to get into the wreckage but was driven back by the intense heat.

It was 15 minutes before Cuyahoga Falls firemen brought the blaze under control, and some time after that before rescue workers could enter the coach. Gasoline from the car burned along the track, setting ties on fire, for an hour or more, endangering storage tanks of three nearby gasoline stations.

JAPS PROCLAIM NEW ECONOMIC SETUP IN EAST

Rome-Berlin axis was implied, but there was no promise of active Japanese cooperation and collaboration in achievement of their aims. Non-involvement will continue for the present.

It was made clear, however, that Japan intends to establish a "special order" in the Far East—to the complete exclusion of all powers unwilling to acknowledge Japan's activities in China as a "stabilizing element" in world affairs.

The accident happened at the intersection of South Court and Franklin Streets.

43 PERSONS DIE AS TRAINS HIT IN AKRON AREA

Slow were at the scene shortly after the wreck and quickly had the fire under control. But it was necessary to use acetylene torches to remove the final few bodies from the red-hot car.

Ambulance drivers said the bodies of the burned victims were found mostly at the head of the coach which had telescoped itself over the leading locomotive of the freight. It was indicated these persons were catapulted to the fore of the coach by the impact of the crash and then burned to death.

The wailing sirens of the first arriving ambulances mingled with the screams of the victims, many of whom died while being sped to hospitals.

Several of the "Doodlebug" passengers were employees of the railroad in Cleveland who commuted to work daily. They were returning to their homes when the collision occurred.

General Superintendent K. C. White and F. H. Crick, Cleveland superintendent, were placed in charge of the railroad's investigation. Coroner Amos and Sheriff Walter P. O'Neil were conducting separate investigations.

Those first on the scene heard the anguished screams of the passengers trapped in the burning wreckage. A few of the bodies which had been hurled through the windows lay flaming along the roadbed. It was several hours before the flames were extinguished and rescuers were able to extricate the first of the victims.

The passenger coach was hurled backwards along the roadbed for several hundred yards by the momentum of the freight carrying a string of 74 loaded cars behind its two powerful engines.

The front end of the coach split open and wrapped itself around the nose of the first engine.

Nearby residents said the screams of those trapped inside could be heard as far as half a mile away as the gasoline-fed flames enveloped them.

The few persons removed alive from the wreckage were sped to hospitals, but most were dead on arrival.

Several were so badly burned identification was virtually impossible. Only until they are reported missing by friends or family or possibly by study of remnants of clothing or baggage will their identities become known.

Witnesses said the freight enroute from Columbus to Cleveland, was traveling at a "good rate" of speed when the crash occurred. The "Doodlebug" shuttled from Hudson to Akron taking passengers to the latter point for connections on main line Pennsylvania trains to Pittsburgh and Chicago.

Murtough was rushed to Akron City Hospital suffering a brain injury which robbed him of his memory. He said he could remember nothing of the wreck and could not even recall he had been on the train. When it was pointed out to him he was wearing trainmen's clothes he is said to have murmured that he must be a railroad man. Further than this, his mind was a blank, temporarily, at least.

The crew of the freight, O. F. Lodge and E. J. Kropf, of Columbus, the engine men, and E. Reynolds, Columbus, and V. Hunsberger, of Akron, firemen, suffered slight injuries. Lodge and Kropf were burned as they leaped through the sheets of flame after the crash. Reynolds and Hunsberger were severely shaken up.

Lodge, engineer on the lead locomotive said the "Doodlebug" loomed up in front of him as he rounded a curve. "We jammed on the brakes and then came a terrible explosion," he said. Reynolds stayed on with him until the engine came to a stop, Lodge said, and then they leaped.

Highway Patrol Acts

Ambulances were rushed to the scene from Akron, Kent, Barberton, Ravenna and other nearby points in response to broadcast and general alarm by the State Highway Patrol.

Tod Wonn, 24, of Akron, one of the several "deadhead" railroad men riding on the gasoline-electric coach, said Shaffer, the conductor, came running back from the baggage compartment shouting: "We are going to crash!"

Both leaped, Wonn related. He said his clothes caught fire, but he extinguished the blaze by rolling in bushes along the tracks. Wonn said his pal, Bruce Kell, was on the train with him but that he did not "see him any more."

Charles Taylor, who lives near the scene of the crash, said flames roared forth, billowing upwards from the broken windows to the roof, almost at the very instant of the collision.

Legs and arms of those who made futile attempts to escape were hanging from the windows, Taylor said. Firemen played water on the wreckage for almost an hour before they could reach the bodies, he added.

"It was the most terrible thing I ever saw in my life," Taylor declared.

A similar description of the scene was given by Russell Steffy, who was nearby as the two trains met. Flaming fuel from the exploded gasoline tanks of the "Doodlebug" spread along the road, setting some of the freight cars and ties afire, he said.

COLUMBUS, August 1—The State Utilities Commission today assigned two inspectors to cooperate with interstate commerce department agents in investigating the worst railroad catastrophe in Ohio in 64 years, one which claimed at least 43 lives last night at Cuyahoga Falls.

Inspector W. E. Harrington was in Akron when the gasoline-electric passenger coach collided with a fast freight on the Pennsylvania lines. He hastened to the scene and was joined later by Inspector O. B. Murray, Columbus.

Harrington and Murray will submit a preliminary report on the responsibility for the crash to Chief Railroad Inspector H. M. Evans as soon as possible, but will await action of the ICC before making a final report.

"The tragedy at Cuyahoga Falls," said Evans, "is the biggest railroad catastrophe in Ohio since 1876 when a bridge collapsed under a double-header of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad (now New York Central) near Ashtabula. More than 100 lives were lost then."

"Last night's crash exceeds anything since and the only comparable railroad accident in Ohio since the turn of the century was the one occurring at Amherst, near Ellyria, in March 1916. Thirty-seven persons lost their lives in the Amherst wreck. The second section of the New York Central's 20th Century Limited crashed into the first section, throwing it over on an adjoining track, both trains being plowed into by another speeding from the opposite direction."

Evans said that ICC agents regularly stationed in Ohio probably would investigate for the federal commission.

'FIFTH COLUMN' FEARED

New Class To Be Ready As

WASHINGTON, August 1—A vast drive against illegal entry of aliens and infiltration of "fifth columns" into the United States is being carried out by the U. S. Immigration Border Patrol.

Hundreds of men are being trained for the patrol at the training school at El Paso, Tex., and subdistrict headquarters on the Mexican and Canadian borders, under an act passed by congress last month providing an additional 712 recruits to the present force of 856 patrolmen.

As each class of 100 men completes its formal training at the El Paso school, a new one will immediately take its place. Preliminary training will be given at the various patrol subdistricts where the men will be held in readiness for any emergency. The entire new force is expected to be on duty by the end of the month.

With new and stringent border crossing regulations taking effect, activities of the patrol, a branch of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, will now be more than doubled. Under the new laws all classes of aliens entering this country are subjected to the closest scrutiny at all designated parts of entry. Regular channels are now closed to many aliens.

To Intensify Control
All patrol activity in the immediate vicinity of the borders will be intensified and patrol units will be established at strategic points on important rail and highway routes leading from the borders toward the interior of the country.

The patrol was created in 1924 after post war conditions in Europe and restrictive immigration laws in this country had caused an illicit traffic of aliens.

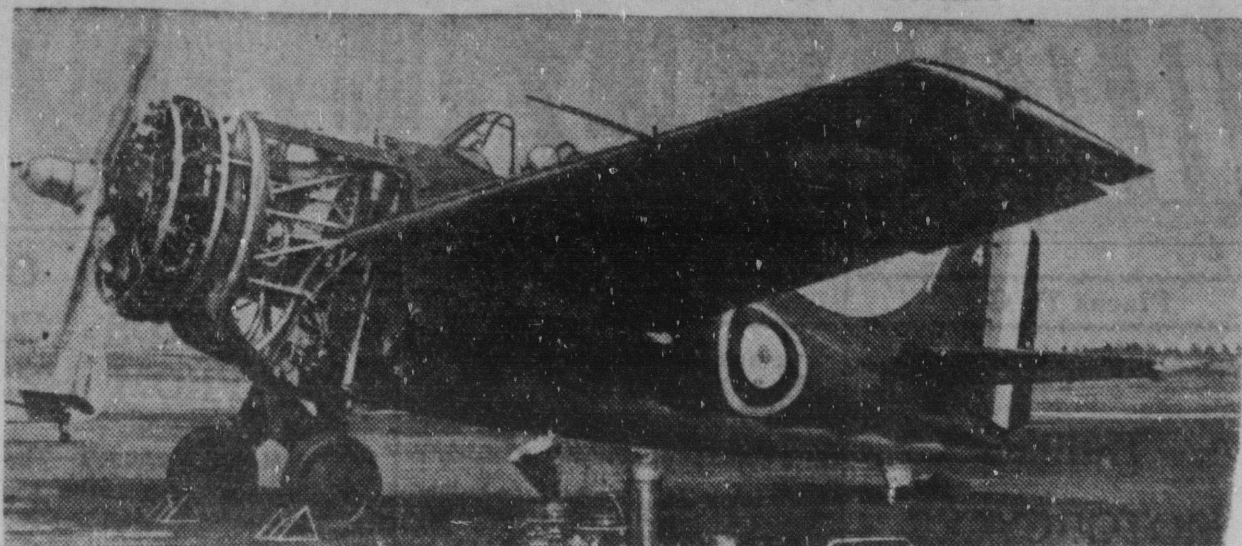

The new World War and the new stringent regulations are expected to again cause numerous attempts at illegal entry. Unlike the days of 1924, however, the force is now well-trained, equipped and has a background of 16 years of experience in combating smuggling and illegal entry.

Have Excellent Equipment

The patrol now has a fleet of 500 fast cars, 14 speed boats, radio communication facilities and radio-equipped observation towers at "hot spots" on the borders, 26 horse outfits and three autogiros, files containing approximately 100,000 fingerprints of aliens and other violators of the immigration laws and many other aids.

Should the situation suddenly become serious prior to the entry upon duty of the recruits, arrangements have been made whereby the U. S. Customs Patrol and the Forest Service will supplement the border patrol with several hundred customs men and forest rangers on a day's notice.

of Willys-Overland at $100,000 a year. Under his contract, Farley will stand to make a lot more than this if the company does well under his management. If Willys-Overland sells 200,000 cars next year, for a net profit of $10,000,000, Jim would get a slice of this melon in addition to his handsome salary.

Farley secretly completed the auto deal last week during the Chicago convention. The contracts were flown there from New York. Jim will get $25,000 a year as Yankees president, plus half the common stock of the syndicate that is taking over the club. Contrary to a widespread report, the actual price being paid for the outfit is $2,500,000 and not $4,000,000. That is what was asked, but $2,500,000 was finally agreed upon.

Principal participants in the syndicate are James Cox, genial newspaper publisher and 1920 Democratic candidate for president, and Jack Whitney, famous sportsman and ex-husband of the famed "Liz" Whitney. The syndicate will hold all the preferred stock and the other half of the common.

Farley's duties will be only nominal and he will have plenty of time for selling automobiles. Note—Farley is leaving the date of his retirement from the cabinet up to the President.

KNUDSEN KNOWS

Those ultra-secret powwows of the National Defense Commission are not always confined to weighty problems of rearmament. Sometimes the discussion has to do with self-defense.

One scorching afternoon recently, the Commission was deliberating a production matter in the auto industry when Sidney Hillman, labor member of the agency, remarked that he was troubled with a personal problem in the industry. He said he had been invited to address the CIO Auto Workers convention in St. Louis, but was hesitant about doing so.

"I want very much to go," said Hillman, "but I don't want to do anything that might impair my effectiveness on the Commission in working with the AFL and CIO. I'm a neutral now and I don't want to change that status."

Hillman's dilemma brought a hearty chuckle from giant William Knudsen, production wizard of the Commission.

"It's certainly tough on you, Sydney," said the former General Motors president, "but I know just how you feel. The Auto Workers had me on a spot in 1937 during their sitdown strike. That was a pretty hot spot and it wasn't any more fun than the one you are up against."

AIR DEFENSE

The seriousness with which the Army Air Corps regards the threat of air attacks against the United States is seen in the private advice they gave an official who came to Washington to discuss a new airport at Los Angeles.

It had been planned to make the airport comparable in size to LaGuardia Field in New York, but Air Corps officials were definitely negative. They said that no military purpose is served by a large airport, but rather that it becomes a hazard in defense operations because it is an easy target for bombing. "Look what happened to the airports and airdromes of France."

Air Corps advisers said future U. S. airports should include underground hangars, and runways made of criss-crossed open-work paving, rather than solid paving. Purpose is to allow grass to grow in the open spaces of the criss-cross, and thus prevent photographing from the air.

CAPITAL GROUNDS

Keeping the lawns of the Capitol grounds moist in these drought days are no less than 6,950 sprinklers. . . . Gardeners are spreading sedge peat over the lawns to improve growth of grass. This operation requires 173 tons of the fertilizer, a Michigan product from Michigan. . . . Just to keep the grass fresh, new grass is planted every year. Approximately annual planting is 3,500 pounds of Italian rye and 3,000 pounds of Kentucky blue grass. . . . The Japanese beetle has to come to the Capitol grounds, requiring use of a heavy arsenic spray to protect the trees.

Under the new laws all classes of aliens entering this country are subjected to the closest scrutiny at all designated ports of entry. Regular channels are now closed to many aliens.

To Intensify Control
All patrol activity in the immediate vicinity of the borders will be intensified and patrol units will be established at strategic points on important rail and highway routes leading from the borders toward the interior of the country.

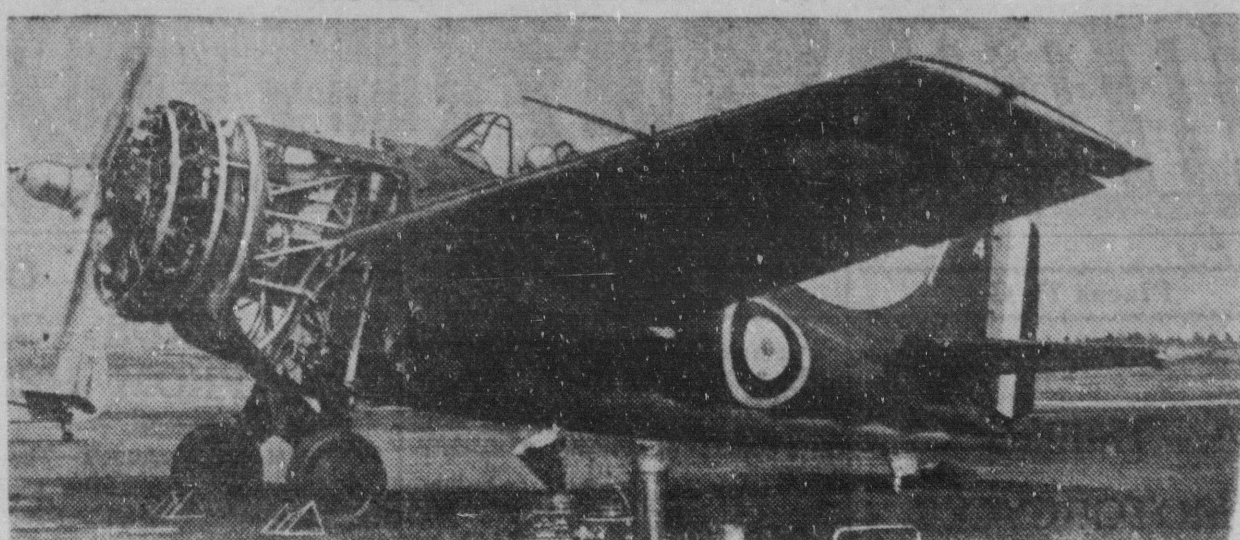

The patrol was created in 1924 after post war conditions in Europe and restrictive immigration laws in this country had caused an illicit traffic of aliens.

The new World War and the new stringent regulations are expected to again cause numerous attempts at illegal entry. Unlike the days of 1924, however, the force is now well-trained, equipped and has a background of 16 years of experience in combating smuggling and illegal entry.

Have Excellent Equipment
The patrol now has a fleet of 500 fast cars, 14 speed boats, radio communication facilities and radio-equipped observation towers at "hot spots" on the borders, 26 horse outfits and three autogiros, files containing approximately 100,000 fingerprints of aliens and other violators of the immigration laws and many other aids.

Should the situation suddenly become serious prior to the entry upon duty of the recruits, arrangements have been made whereby the U. S. Customs Patrol and the Forest Service will supplement the border patrol with several hundred customs men and forest rangers on a day's notice.

Hardy Family, Town of Carvel Now
In Third Year of Film Careers

The Judge James K. Hardy family and the town of Carvel are now entering the third year of their existence. Together, they have been one of the biggest surprises ever to come out of Hollywood. This is the story of how it all began.

As the typical American family and community, doing and saying the things that average Americans do and say, the Hardy family has won an affectionate and enviable place in the hearts of the American public. Carvel brings back nostalgic memories to everyone who ever lived in a small town.

It was the simple and human qualities of the Hardys and Carvel that quietly brought them into prominence in the first place. But the spontaneous enthusiasm their appearance created wasn't entirely anticipated. The Hardy Family attained permanence on the night of December 10, 1937, when an excited group of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives stood on a curbstone before a Hollywood theatre, following the preview of "You're Only Young Once," and voted unanimously to make Judge Hardy and his energetic family the subject of a motion picture series.

Introduction in 1937
The Hardy's however, were introduced to film audiences a few months earlier, on March 10, 1937, in a nice little picture titled, "A Family Affair." It hardly caused a ripple, because it pretended to be nothing more than a pleasant sixty minutes of entertainment and gentle laughter with, not at, the Great American Family. The picture was as honey and comfortable as an old dressing jacket and slippers before the fire place, but it was admittedly not in the epic class, and received no great ballyhoo. All unlooked for, it struck a familiar and responsive chord in the public mind and memory, resulting in an amazing demand for more.

The Hardy's owe their discovery to a play by Aurania Rouverol, a favorite with stock companies a decade ago, which contained the Hardy characters, and emerged on film as "A Family Affair."

The job of writing the screen play was assigned to Kay Van Riper, a small town girl from Winona, Minnesota. It was Miss Van Riper's big chance and she proved a fortunate choice. She tackled it, not only with energy and enthusiasm, but with a thorough knowledge of her subject. To her, the Hardy's were real people, the kind of wholesome, everyday folks she had known all her life. The result was a warm, delightfully refreshing script that caused studio executives to chuckle and to remember. When the script was revised and approved, it was nothing more than a series of incidents from the lives of those who brought the film to the screen.

"A Family Affair" did not suggest a series, but as letters poured in from all sections of the country, asking to see more of the Hardys, it figured prominently in story conferences and recommended another picture. This was "You're Only Young Once," which established the now familiar Hardy characters, Lewis Stone as Judge Hardy, Mickey Rooney as Andy, Pay Holden as Mrs. Hardy, Cecilia Parker as Marian, Sara Haden as Aunt Milly and Ann Rutherford as Polly, Andy's girl friend.

Another Prepared

To meet the response that greeted the Hardys, another picture was hastily prepared, "Judge Hardy's Children." It received a lucky break. A picture was needed to fill a first run release date. The only picture available was the Hardy film. There was some trepidation about giving so unpretentious a movie top billing. This was soon dispelled when the unanimous acclaim it received heralded the fact that the Hardys had definitely arrived and were here to stay. "Love Finds Andy Hardy" followed to become a smash hit.

The latest Hardy picture, "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," is the ninth and there are a dozen more in various stages of preparation, dealing with a wide variety of Hardy Family adventures and experiences.

Ever since they became firmly established in the film firmament, several unbroken rules have been laid down for the Hardys' No member of the family is permitted to become dominant at the expense of the others, although Andy as the typical American boy, is naturally the key figure. Each Hardy picture has four separate stories. There is Andy's story, featuring his romantic problems as well as those of his jalopy, which has been a source of trouble ever since he purchased it in "Love Finds Andy Hardy," the story of Judge and Mrs. Hardy, Miriam's story and Aunt Milly's story. Every Hardy picture gives each member an opportunity to shine and ends with the Hardys happy together in their home.

The members of the cast have become so completely associated with the Hardys that in a way, they have lost their own individual personalities in the characters they portray. On the set both in front of the camera and behind it, they use their character names as familiarly as their own. Stone is always "Judge," Mickey is "Andy," and Miss Holden is "Ma" to everyone.

Andy gets the credit for starting Mickey on the way to his present prominence and fame. For although Mickey had been a popular child and boy actor from the time he was two, Andy made him a boy character actor and brought him new and bigger opportunities in such films as "Boys Town," "Babes in Arms," which won him nomination for the Academy Award, and most recently, "Young Tom Edison."

Stone has been equally affected as the Judge. He was on the verge of retiring when the part bobbed up, an innocuous role on the surface. Now he can't quit. Nor can he disassociate himself from the Judge, even if he wanted to. He tried it two years back in a picture called "The Chaser," playing one of those harmless dissolute characters he does so well. This drew down the wrath of movie goers everywhere, who said in no uncertain words that it was a downright shame to spatter celluloid mud on a figure so firmly planted in the affections of the American public. Incidentally, it was Stone, not the Studio, that got the blame.

Now Stone is quite content to remain Judge Hardy. For one thing, his fan mail has taken on a new tone, one that has brought him a great deal of personal satisfaction. "The sentiment has steadily increased," he said. "It seems that I have lost my identity in Judge Hardy. It's given me something to live up to."

All of the Hardys feel the same way about it.

Farley secretly completed the auto deal last week during the Chicago convention. The contracts were flown there from New York. Jim will get $25,000 a year as Yankees president, plus half the common stock of the syndicate that is taking over the club. Contrary to a widespread report, the actual price being paid for the outfit is $2,500,000 and not $4,000,000. That is what was asked, but $2,500,000 was finally agreed upon.

Principal participants in the syndicate are James Cox, genial newspaper publisher and 1920 Democratic candidate for president, and Jock Whitney, famous sportsman and ex-husband of the famed "Liz" Whitney. The syndicate will hold all the preferred stock and the other half of the common.

Farley's duties will be only nominal and he will have plenty of time for selling automobiles. Note—Farley is leaving the date of his retirement from the cabinet up to the President.

One scorching afternoon recently, the Commission was deliberating a production matter in the auto industry when Sidney Hillman, labor member of the agency, remarked that he was troubled with a personal problem in the industry. He said he had been invited to address the CIO Auto Workers convention in St. Louis, but was hesitant about doing so.

"I want very much to go," said Hillman, "but I don't want to do anything that might impair my effectiveness on the Commission in working with the AFL and CIO. I'm a neutral now and I don't want to change that status."

Hillman's dilemma brought a hearty chuckle from giant William Knudsen, production wizard of the Commission.

"It's certainly tough on you, Sydney," said the former General Motors president, "but I know just how you feel. The Auto Workers had me on a spot in 1937 during their sitdown strike. That was a pretty hot spot and it wasn't any more fun than the one you are up against."

tary purpose is served by a large airport, but rather that it becomes a hazard in defense operations because it is an easy target for bombing. "Look what happened to the airports and airdromes of France."

Air Corps advisers said future U. S. airports should include underground hangars, and runways made of criss-crossed open-work paving, rather than solid paving. Purpose is to allow grass to grow in the open spaces of the criss-cross, and thus prevent photographing from the air.

CAPITAL GROUNDS
Keeping the lawns of the Capitol grounds moist in these drought days are no less than 6,950 sprinklers. . . . Gardeners are spreading sedge peat over the lawns to improve growth of grass. This operation requires 173 tons of the fertilizer, a Michigan product from Michigan. . . . Just to keep the grass fresh, new grass is planted every year. Approximately annual planting is 3,500 pounds of Italian rye and 3,000 pounds of Kentucky blue grass. . . . The Japanese beetle has to come to the Capitol grounds, requiring use of a heavy arsenic spray to protect the trees.

BOTH PARTIES ABOLISHED
SAN FRANCISCO, — It really doesn't matter what Republicans and Democrats are running for office. There aren't any such parties. The California Historical Society has discovered that in 1869 His Majesty, Norton I, Emperor of the United States and Protector of Mexico, abolished both parties.

Junior Fair Board Seeks Space for Show Exhibits

Members Meet Wednesday Evening, Elect Charles McCray President

ARMORY NOT AVAILABLE

Problem To Be Put Into Hands Of Directors At August 6 Meeting

Faced with a problem of finding adequate space for their Pumpkin Show exhibits this year, members of the Junior and Senior Fair Boards met in the office of George McDowell, secretary of the senior board, and discussed means whereby such space might be provided.

A committee consisting of F. K. Blair, Kenneth Holtrey, George Mowery, Charles McCray, Christine Schreiner and G. D. Bradley was appointed to lay the problem before Pumpkin Show directors at the directors' meeting next Tuesday. Junior Fair members, who used the Armory last year for their exhibits, were deprived of the use of the building when a law was passed recently forbidding the use of such buildings for anything except military purposes.

Possibilities of using tents was discussed and the group expressed the opinion that for the live stock exhibits, tents would be adequate. For other displays, however, including school exhibits, it was generally felt that possibilities of adverse weather conditions, fire and thefts made the use of tents inadvisable.

At the meeting the Junior Fair group elected Charles McCray, of Ashville, president; George Mowery, of Muhlenberg Township, vice-president, and Christine Schreiner, of Circleville, secretary-treasurer.

A tentative budget providing for appropriations for the eight organizations participating in the Junior Fair displays, was adopted. It read as follows: 4-H clubs, $500; Vocational Agriculture, $60; Home Economics, $67.50; Juvenile Grange, $30; Future Farmers, $18; Boy Scouts, $30; Girl Scouts, $25; and School Shops, $60.

TOKYO, Aug. 1 — The United States embargo on shipments of aviation gasoline undoubtedly is designed to "bring economic pressure on Japan," a Japanese navy spokesman declared today, and therefore is considered an "unfriendly action."

WILLKIE MEETS PARTY LEADERS

Discussion Of Campaign Plans Scheduled For Colorado Springs

COLORADO SPRINGS, August 1—Whether Wendell Willkie will ride with the Republican machine or continue to travel ahead of it with his personal campaign will be determined here Saturday when the new leaders of the party arrive here for consultation.

Until now, the candidate nominated by the Republicans for the presidency has shown little desire to be managed. Since Philadelphia and the national convention, Willkie has been his own manager, brain trust and advance agent.

Now the national leadership headed by Chairman Joe Martin—the candidate's own selection—is due in to discuss such matters as financing the campaign, the issues and the itinerary.

Willkie has already had a little to say on all those points. He has said that he will not accept any contribution larger than $5,000 and that he wants small contributions "widely diffused." He has completed his acceptance speech, except for the farm section, and discussed the issues in several impromptu speeches. He has done some thinking about an itinerary.

That he expects his views to prevail seems apparent from the fact that he has allowed the party leaders only one day to consult with him on all the angles of the campaign. The leaders arrive Saturday and the candidate leaves

SOLON TO ENTER MILITARY CAMP

William Radcliff Leaves Friday For Training At Ft. Harrison

William D. Radcliff, Williamsport, state representative from Pickaway County, will leave Friday for a business and professional men's military training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana. The camp will open August 2 and continue until August 31.

The 300 men from the district who plan to attend will practice regular military tactics. Uniforms will be furnished, but each man must pay an $18 mess bill and a $25 fee, Radcliff said.

While her husband is away, Mrs. Radcliff will visit with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Hitler, of West Mound Street.

Among thrilling vacation experiences don't overlook the open-eyed amazement of city girls seeing a cow for the first time.

WILLKIE MEETS PARTY LEADERS

Discussion Of Campaign Plans Scheduled For Colorado Springs

COLORADO SPRINGS, August 1—Whether Wendell Willkie will ride with the Republican machine or continue to travel ahead of it with his personal campaign will be determined here Saturday when the new leaders of the party arrive here for consultation.

Until now, the candidate nominated by the Republicans for the presidency has shown little desire to be managed. Since Philadelphia and the national convention, Willkie has been his own manager, brain trust and advance agent.

Now the national leadership headed by Chairman Joe Martin—the candidate's own selection—is due in to discuss such matters as financing the campaign, the issues and the itinerary.

Willkie has already had a little to say on all those points. He has said that he will not accept any contribution larger than $5,000 and that he wants small contributions "widely diffused." He has completed his acceptance speech, except for the farm section, and discussed the issues in several impromptu speeches. He has done some thinking about an itinerary.

That he expects his views to prevail seems apparent from the fact that he has allowed the party leaders only one day to consult with him on all the angles of the campaign. The leaders arrive Saturday and the candidate leaves

Sunday for Des Moines to be gone until Tuesday.

It's a long trek from Washington and points east to Colorado Springs, but the leaders appear satisfied to take it for even this brief consultation.

There are times, too, when John Q. Public makes a pretty good dictator.

SOLON TO ENTER MILITARY CAMP

William Radcliff Leaves Friday For Training At Ft. Harrison

William D. Radcliff, Williamsport, state representative from Pickaway County, will leave Friday for a business and professional men's military training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana. The camp will open August 2 and continue until August 31.

The 300 men from the district who plan to attend will practice regular military tactics. Uniforms will be furnished, but each man must pay an $18 mess bill and a $25 fee, Radcliff said.

While her husband is away, Mrs. Radcliff will visit with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Hitler, of West Mound Street.

Among thrilling vacation experiences don't overlook the open-eyed amazement of city girls seeing a cow for the first time.
